GENERAL MORGAN'S GRAND SPEECH TO DAY. General Morgan to-day made one of the with the President. est speeches delivered in the Senate during the present debate. He opened with an elaborate exposition of the rights of minorliles as secured by the Constitution. He referred to the various clauses of that instrument bearing upon these rights, and showed with a great deal of power that the framers of the Constitution had been careful to guard well the rights of minorities. He read the clause of the Constitution in regard to the ratification of treaties which requires a two-thirds vote to confirm, and said this secures to a minority of a little over a third of the Senate the power to reject revenue, $332.772; customs, $769.225. any treaty or agreement that the President might have made with a foreign Power. He read also the rule which gives one fifth of the Senate the right to call for the ayes and noes on every pending question.
